

THE TORTOISE AND THE HARE

Once upon a time, a speedy hare loved to boast about how fast he could run. Tired of hearing him brag, a humble tortoise challenged him to a race. The hare laughed at the idea but agreed. When the race began, the hare quickly ran far ahead and, feeling confident, decided to take a nap under a tree. Meanwhile, the tortoise kept moving slowly and steadily without stopping. By the time the hare woke up, the tortoise was nearing the finish line. The hare sprinted as fast as he could, but it was too late. The tortoise crossed the finish line first and won the race. From that day on, everyone remembered that slow and steady wins the race.

THE BOY WHO CRIED WOLF

Once upon a time, a young shepherd boy watched over a flock of sheep near a village. Bored and wanting attention, he shouted, "Wolf! Wolf! A wolf is attacking the sheep!" The villagers rushed to help, only to find that there was no wolf. The boy laughed at their surprise. A few days later, he played the same trick again, and the villagers were annoyed when they discovered it was another false alarm. Then one evening, a real wolf appeared and began chasing the sheep. The frightened boy cried out for help, but the villagers thought he was joking once more and ignored him. The wolf scattered the flock, and the boy learned an important lesson: people stop believing those who tell lies, even when they are telling the truth.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE

Once upon a time, a mighty lion was sleeping peacefully in the forest. A tiny mouse accidentally ran across his paw and woke him up. Angry, the lion caught the mouse and was about to eat him. The frightened mouse begged for mercy and promised to help the lion someday. The lion laughed at the idea but let him go.

A few days later, the lion became trapped in a hunter's net. Hearing his roars, the mouse rushed over and began gnawing through the ropes. Soon, the lion was free. The lion thanked the mouse and learned that even the smallest friend can be a great help.

THE ANT AND THE GRASSHOPPER

Once upon a time, an ant spent the summer gathering food and storing it for winter. Nearby, a grasshopper sang songs and played all day long. He laughed at the ant for working so hard. When winter arrived, the ground was covered with snow, and food became scarce. The ant stayed warm and had plenty to eat. The grasshopper, however, was hungry and cold. Realizing his mistake, he wished he had prepared for the future.

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES

Once upon a time, a hungry fox was walking through a vineyard. He noticed a bunch of ripe grapes hanging high above him. The fox jumped again and again, trying to reach them, but they were too high.

After many failed attempts, he finally gave up and walked away. As he left, he said, "Those grapes were probably sour anyway." The fox pretended he did not want them because he could not have them.

THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGGS

Once upon a time, a farmer owned a goose that laid a golden egg every day. The farmer sold the eggs and soon became wealthy. However, he grew greedy and wanted all the gold at once. Thinking the goose must contain a treasure inside, he killed it and cut it open. To his disappointment, the goose was just like any other goose. The farmer lost the goose and the golden eggs forever.

THE NORTH WIND AND THE SUN

Once upon a time, the North Wind and the Sun argued about who was stronger. They decided to test their strength on a traveler walking along a road. The North Wind blew as hard as he could, but the traveler only wrapped his coat more tightly around himself.

Then the Sun shone warmly. The traveler soon felt hot and took off his coat. The Sun smiled and showed that gentleness can succeed where force fails.
